MONDAY MORNING, APRIL 28, 1879.

Mr. John McCullough, the Actor, and the Shakespeare Club.

This distinguished delineator of the Shakespearean drama, who so much delighted our people by his renditions of Friday and Saturday nights in Othello and Richard Third, had a reception from the Shakespeare club Saturday afternoon at the Senate Chamber of the Capitol, where he was received by Mr. Leighton, the President, and introduced to a large number of the members of the club. After a pleasant hour of informal conversation upon the various topics that belong to Mr. McCullough's profession, he gave a recitation at the request of the President, choosing for his theme a poem called "The Stowaway," which appeared in print in the Art Journal from the pen of Arthur Matteson some time ago. We need not say that the recitation was worthy of McCullough's reputation as a reader. It was a selection that seemed to very much enlist his sympathies and that he recited with a great deal of feeling. As the poem seemed to be received with decided favor by those who listened to it, we herewith reproduce it as follows:

THE STOWAWAY.

Now lads a short yarn I'll justa pie,
As I have in my very last year,
About a boy as had a good deal of
Or else I'm a good deal of a
From Liverpool, just out three days, lads,
The good ship floating over the deep—
The day bright with sunshine above us,
Beneath us the waters above us.

Not a bad-tempered laborer among us—
A jolly crew never sailer,
"Ope the first mate, but a bit of a savage,
But good natured as ever was hallooed.

Regulation, good order, his motto,
Strong as iron, as steady as quick,
With a couple of curly black eyebrows,
And eyes as blue as Old Nick.

One day he comes up from below deck,
A grumpy as hell as the sea,
A poor little fellow, young and thin,
As though he were home with his mamma.

And the mate asked the boy, rather roughly,
How he came to be stowed away?
A chaffin' the mates and captain,
Sailin', eatin', and all without pay?

The lad had a face bright and sunny,
A pair of blue eyes like a star,
And looks up at the mate, first-rate, boys,
And shakes back his long, shining curls.

"And, my mate, in a voice clear and pretty,
"My step-father brought me aboard here,
And he told me away down the stairs there,
For to keep me he couldn't afford."

And he told me the lad would take me
To Halifax town, oh, so far,
And he says, now the lord your father
Who lives there, the good single ear.

"It's his mate," says the mate,
"Not your father, but some of these big sailors here."

Speak up, tell the truth, do you hear?
"I want us," growled the mate who stood around him.

"What's your name?" says one of the mates—
"My name," says the lad, "is Frank, just turned nine."

"Oh my lads," says another bearded seaman,
"Let him go to bed and sleep soundly,
And I'll work out his passage for you."

"Hollo!" says the mate, "that your name, man,
I'll tell the mate to go to bed, man,
I'll tell the mate to go to bed, man,
I'll tell the mate to go to bed, man."

Then with a look he said him
And tumbled the poor little fellow
And says he "nips to below" will change to
If it don't, back to England you go."

"I look him some dinner, he sure mates,
Just like an old nine years of age,
And the next day soon as he's told
The mate brings him out of his cage."

"And he plants him afore us amidships—
His eyes like the coals all alight,
And says through his teeth, mate with passion,
And his hands fitted ready to smite."

"Speak the truth, and then I'll forgive you;
For the truth I will have, speak it out.
It wasn't your father as brought you aboard,
But some of these men hereabout."

"Then that pair of blue eyes, bright and win-
Clear and steady with innocent youth,
Looks up at the seafaring mate, lads,
And says, "he, I have told you the truth."

"The mate said he didn't believe him,
Though everyone else did on board;
With rough hand, he laid his finger on him,
And cried: "You shall hang, by the Lord."

And he snatched his watch out of his pocket,
Just as if he'd been driving a knife,
"If it isn't nine minutes past five," he said,
There's a rope, and good-bye to dear life."

Then he never sees such a sight, mates,
As that boy with his pale, pretty face,
Froth-foam, and steady, with passion,
Never thinking or asking for grace."

"Eight minutes went by, all in silence;
Says the mate, "Speak, lad, my boy, my boy!"
His eyes slowly filling with tears,
He faltering, said: "May I pray?"

"I'm a rough and hard old tarspin,
As any blue-jacket's worth,
But I felt the saltwater spring to my eyes, lads,
And my heart rose up in my throat."

And the little chap knelt on the deck there,
And his hands he clasped over his breast,
Just as he must have done often at home lads,
At night when going to rest."

And softens the first words "Our Father,"
Clear and sweet from that dear boy's lips,
But low as they were, heard like a trumpet
By every true man on board of that ship."

Every bit of that prayer, mates,
"If you pray to the Lord, mates, pray to the Lord,
And for all the bright gold of the Indies
I wouldn't have him out of my sight."

And, when he had finished, praying,
And lifting his blue eyes, saying,
"O, dear Lord Jesus, take me to heaven,
Back again to my own mother's love."

ON his feet he had fallen faint,
And his hands he clasped over his breast,
And his voice he whispered, "O, dear Lord Jesus,
And his lips he kissed, saying, "O, dear Lord Jesus, take me to heaven, back again to my own mother's love."

Like a man, says the mate,
"O, dear Lord Jesus, take me to heaven, back again to my own mother's love."

"You believe me now, then said the youngster,
Believe you, and he kissed him once more—
"I've told you down your life for the truth, lads,
Believe you, from now on."

"You believe me now, then said the youngster,
Believe you, and he kissed him once more—
"I've told you down your life for the truth, lads,
Believe you, from now on."

"And if that chap wasn't a model
Frank, young or old, short or tall,
And if that lad, the story to make men of,
Old Red, he knows enough after all."

New Vices Have Taken Place of Hum-Drinking.

A recent address of Gov. Garcelon, before the Maine Temperance convention, calls attention to various kinds of intemperance which have generally escaped attention of reformers in that State. He has been for many years an eminent physician of large practice, and a close observer of the habits of the people. He spoke of the use of tobacco as an increasing evil, especially among the young, the tendency of which is to enervate an efforts for stronger stimulants, besides being deleterious in itself. In addition to chewing and smoking, he says snuff-dipping is becoming almost universal. As he added himself, this fact may be as surprising as it excites surprise. The use of opiates has also increased to an alarming extent. Many a man, he says, has appeared upon the stand advocating temperance who had in his pocket two bottles of laudanum or black drops, which gave the way to an early grave. The lady, too, carries chloroform and ether to moisten her handkerchief with which to allay nervous excitement. As a practicing physician and an observer of human nature, he placed all these forms of intemperance in the same category with the intemperance use of spirituous liquors, all of which demand correction.

Such views were timely and all the more needed from the fact that the temperance reformers have confined their efforts too closely to but one phase of the great evil, and, as a rule, prescribed too remedied for that. They have proceeded too much upon the ground that if they could prohibit the sale of intoxicating drinks, there would be no more drunkenness, and the work of reform would be complete. Hence hanging ruin-makers has been advocated as the suitable penalty for their offenses, and as the appropriate remedy for intemperance. This is Gen. Neal Dow's specific, and his views are potent on the subject.

In view of Gov. Garcelon's disclosures there is a demand for something more effective than the hand of the executioner. Or, that it is to be the executed agent for a kind of intemperance, and is effective, it should be prescribed for the dealers in opium and tobacco.

There can be no question that opium-eating has increased to a fearful extent. Not long since from Staunton, Va., a conference of druggists reported that the ratio of increase of sales in 1877 over 1876 was 92 per cent, and in 1878 over the preceding year 50 per cent. That was another section of our country, and was thought to be a peculiar characteristic of the Shenandoah valley. But we will venture the assertion that the percentage of increase in Maine has been quite as large and that the sales of druggists since the prohibitory legislation has been in force will show as much the fact, the change from the use of intoxicating liquors to opium is far from being an improvement. Gov. Garcelon has done the people good service by directing attention to new channels of inquiry. It followed up, it will be found, that the "Maine law" has not been the grand instrument of reform claimed in its behalf, and that, after all that can be said and done to correct personal and social evils, nothing is so effective as good example and an appeal to the higher nature of the individual and society.

STUEBENVILLE.

STUEBENVILLE, April 26.

Editors Intelligencer.

Your correspondent purposes to avoid any controversy with any newspaper, but when the Stuebenville Gazette questions his veracity and denounces him in a libelous invective, he is not so timid as to passively wrap himself up in his concealed identity, content that the arrows of contumely cannot penetrate this coat-of-mail. A former letter from the undersigned contained the statement that "the public press of this city is neutral, and is silent on this subject (pikes), as the anti-pike men threaten to stop any paper that advocates pikes." Referring to this Gazette says the author "is one of the few individuals in Steubenville who do not read the Gazette, or else he is a bare-faced liar." It is plain to see from his vulgar, the foul and loathsome channel in which the Gazette man's mind runs. However, when we communicated the facts quoted above, we knew that if we spoke of it, it will be observed that reference was made therein to present time alone, and no mention was made of the attitude our journals assumed prior to the election. To be brief and to prove the inaccuracies of the Gazette and its malicious defamation of itself, we need only to remind those conversant with the affair that when the anti-pike convention which met here denominated the majority for pikes as "pretended," and some delegates proclaimed that there was fraud in securing that majority, the paper defended the genuineness of the returns and the characters of the men who officiated at the polls? Since this meeting was held these journalists have been as silent as sleep, championing neither the one side nor the other, hence it would logically follow that they have been neutral. We reiterate, what we said before, the coarseness and profanity of the writer of the cowardly and odious paragraph in which are contained, are indicative of a mind, inassimilable to the fine purposes of honor, and do not establish that he has very affluent facilities for telling the truth himself. He descends to borrow from the vocabulary of the dregs of society to appraise the feverish passion, and if some powerful and poisonous stimulus does not sway the sceptre of his intellect, he willfully and recklessly prevaricates.

Serious Danger.

Threatens every man, woman or child living in a region of country where fever and ague is prevalent, since the germs of malarial disease are inhaled from the air and are conveyed from the water of such a region. Medical aid is absolutely necessary to nullify this danger. As a means of fortifying and acclimating the system so as to be able to resist the malarial poison, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is incomparably the best and the most popular. It regulates the stomach, liver and bowels, and cures malarial fever, and is speedily rectified by the Bitters. The functions of digestion and secretion are assisted by its use, and a vigorous as well as regular condition of the system is promoted by it. Constipation and dyspepsia are thus defended against the inroads of malarial by this matchless preventive, which is also a certain and thorough remedy in the worst cases of intermittent and remittent fevers.
